

Transactional Management for Service Oriented Environments

Web service environments are characterized by autonomous components working together to achieve a common goal. One approach to couple them for a specific goal is by transactions. Transactions in such environments can run longer and may have a recovery problem due to run time problems of its components/services. In this project you will look at approaches for transactional management and recovery for such environment. You will study them and try to improve them. Improvements should be shown experimentally.

contact: Peter Dolog dolog@cs.aau.dk

